NEWS FOR VETERANS

For the benefit of post-Korean veterans, the Veterans Administration has supplied a list of questions and answers on the education and training program of the Korean GI Bill, Public Law 550, dealing with eligibility requirements and the length of training that can be taken. They are as follows:

Q—Just what is the education and training program of the Korean GI Bill?

A—It is a program of furnishing financial aid for schooling and training to eligible veterans who served after June 27, 1950, the date of the outbreak of the Korean conflict.

Q—Who is eligible for training?

A—A veteran is eligible if he meets all these requirements: (1) a discharge or release from service under conditions other than dishonorable; (2) active military duty any time after June 27, 1950, and before the end of the present emergency, and (3) at least 90 days total service, unless discharged sooner for an actual service-incurred disability.

Q—Must a veteran have served in Korea to be eligible for the training benefits?

A—No. He may have served in the Armed Forces any place in the world . . in the United States or abroad . . and not necessarily in Korea.

Q—Are there any kinds of military service that do not count, in figuring whether a veteran has enough service to qualify?

A—Two types of service do not count: time spent in a civilian school studying courses offered to civilians, and time spent as a cadet or midshipman in one of the Service academies.

Q—Assume that a veteran meets all the requirements for training. May he enroll under the Korean GI Bill even though he has gone back on active duty and is in uniform?

A—No. Veterans are not eligible for Korean GI Bill training while on active duty, even though they meet all the law's basic requirements.

Farm Union Takes Up For Small Farmer

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson August 20, John B. Vance, president of the Virginia Farmers Union, urged that the so-called "cross-compliance" regulation of the Department of Agriculture be modified so as to permit farmers to grow enough wheat for home consumption without losing price support protection on their tobacco, peanuts, cotton and other crops.

Vance said that the regulation now in effect would free farmers to comply with their wheat allotment in order to qualify for price supports on other crops.

"A large majority of the wheat producers of this state," Vance wrote "are small, non-commercial growers —farmers who produce only enough wheat for home consumption and a few bushels for county seed."

The letter added, "There are approximately 45,000 wheat acreage allotments in Virginia, and of this number approximately 25,000 are five acres or less, including at least 5,000 allotments of one acre. In the past, this group of small growers has not participated in the wheat price support program since they were not producing for market, and therefore, made very little effort, if any, to maintain records of their past acreages and production. This now places them in the position of not being able to prove their historical base, and thereby qualify for larger allotments."

Vance wrote, "I should also like to point out that farmers of this state have suffered severe drought for the past three years. At best, their financial and economic condition is extremely critical. This is especially true of the group of farmers who will be hit the hardest by this extreme and unfair order. If it is the desire of the Department of Agriculture and of the Administration to put the small farmer out of business, I know of no surer way to do it."

The Virginia Farmers Union recommended that any farmer be permitted to produce up to fifteen acres of wheat for home consumption, without losing price supports on his other crops.

Abbitt Writes Secretary Benson on Wheat O

or lose support on the commodities that he does comply with. The effect of your order is to circumvent the law referred to above and say to the small farmers of Virginia who are not producing commercial wheat that even though you cannot vote in the referendum, even though the law permits you to grow as much as fifteen acres of wheat and even though you do not sell your wheat commercially, if you grow one acre over your wheat allotment and still less than fifteen acres you cannot receive support on your tobacco, on your peanuts, or on your cotton crop which you have produced in accordance with the acreage allotted to you.

This is rank injustice and will be most detrimental to thousands of small farmers in Virginia who have been raising five to ten acres of wheat but keeping no record of same because they were not affected by the quota law. Many of our small farmers have now been given a wheat acreage allotment of only several acres, and the amount of wheat to be produced on this acreage is not sufficient to produce the necessary flour for their families and feed for their livestock. If they exceed their allotment and produce enough wheat for their own needs, even though they produce less than fifteen acres, all price supports will be taken from them on their cotton, peanut and tobacco crops although they do not exceed their allotments for those particular crops.

We have never felt that you had the authority to issue such an order which is now known as cross-compliance. The purpose of this letter is to call your attention to the plight of our small farmers and the irreparable injury that your order is causing them and to let you know that we object to such rank regulation of our people. It seems to us that the least that could be done is to amend your order so as to see that it does not apply to those producers who produce only such less as permitted under the law and by the representatives of the people of this great state.

We would also like to call your attention that provision has just passed by the Congress which gives you authority to permit your diverted acres to be put into production, take into consideration the importance of a prudent farmer as to permit the production of crops for storage and consumption in the farm feeding operation. Certainly this provision will enable you to put into effect the provisions and regulations to protect the small wheat farmers, which you will see fit to do.

Sincerely yours,

W. M. Abbitt

APPLE PEST IS INCREASING IN THE SHENANDOAH ORCHARDS

Spotted tentiform leaminers are causing heavy losses in apple orchards in the upper Shenandoah Valley, are still definitely on the increase.

Arthur P. Morris, associate entomologist at VPI, in his weekly report on insect activities for Virginia farmers, warns that all growers should inspect their orchards for the pest. Damage is done when the insects "mine" the leaves causing frequent death.

Codling moths also are increasing in orchards of the upper Shenandoah, and may do more severe damage to apples before the season is over if the weather remains favorable for them.

A weevil, new to the state of Virginia, has been found in a nursery in Northampton County, and Morris says farmers should be on the lookout for a new pest of stored grain, the Khapra beetle, introduced into this country from abroad. It has not been reported east of the Mississippi, but could easily be present although not identified.

On truck crops in eastern Virginia, insect numbers are increasing and controls are needed before damage is too heavy.

After the United States purchased the Danish West Indies in 1917 the name was changed to Virgin Islands.

John Law's scheme for exploiting the resources of French Louisiana is known as the Mississippi Bubble.
